#26. We say the verb is in the optative mood, because "mood" expresses the relationship of the verb to reality from the speaker's point of view. If he is stating a fact, he uses a verb in the indicative mood. If he is making a command, he uses the imperative mood (see imperatives Yehuda v.17,20-24). If he wishes to indicate uncertain contingency or conditional possibility, he uses the subjunctive mood. For example, notice the subjunctive mood of the verb in this sentence: "If you continue (indefinite predication is uncertain and contingent) in my Word, then you are truly talmidim of mine." (Yochanan 8:31, p.350, UBSGNT). There is another verb in the optative mood (we know this from the  $\sigma\alpha$ 1 at the end of )  $E\pi\iota\tau\iota\mu\eta\sigma\alpha\iota$  in Yehuda 9 (word #182), where the archangel Michael says to the devil, "May the L-rd rebuke you!"

The optative mood tells us that not only does the archangel

Michael wish that the L-rd will rebuke the devil, but such an outcome is attainable.

Back at B. we looked at all the ways to write "the" (the definite article) in Greek. Now, since we just read the personal pronoun  $\upsilon\mu\iota\nu$ , let's look at ways the personal pronoun

(I,you,he,she,it,they,etc) is written in the Brit Chadasha

Scriptures.
